

CONOR KEHOE

Conor is Chair of the United Nations-supported Principles for Responsible Investment (PRI). UN PRI advances the Principles of Responsible Investing (PRI) among its signatories - c 5000 Asset Owners and Asset Managers who have some $120tn of assets under management.

Conor previously chaired the International Integrated Reporting Council (IIRC) – a coalition of 70 leading Sustainability organisations - during its merger with SASB and the subsequent merger of the two into the IFRS to form the International Sustainability Standards Board (ISSB) (Sept 2022). He was a member of the G7 Impact Accounting Taskforce and is involved in organisations advancing the case for impact accounting.

He is an Advisory Board member at Blackrock and a Special Advisor at McKinsey where he founded and co-leads McKinsey's Board Intelligence Forum for European non-executives and chairs. Previously, he co-founded McKinsey's Private Equity and Principal Investor Industry (PEPI) Practice and latterly McKinsey New Ventures. While at McKinsey he was a member of the founding team of Focussing Capital on the Long Term (FCLTGlobal.org).

Originally a software engineer, he also led McKinsey's Tech and Telecom Practice in Europe. He advises a small number of softwarebased growth stage companies along with the Turing Institute (the UK's data science institute). He is an adjunct lecturer at Tsinghua University and, recently, he revived his rusty software skills and completed Stanford's Machine Learning Course.

Conor, an Irish citizen, splits his time between London, U.K. and Northeast Harbor Maine, USA.
